Brandon Cullum is a talented illustrator and innovative story writer. But his ability to teach kids, and remind adults, the valuable lessons that "games are more fun for two than one" is a lasting story. I hope you read this story and are reminded that to live with community- sharing- and working together is better than being a mean dinosaur.

Handsome young Brandon Cullum writes children's books and if this debut offering is the standard he is setting for his series, he is headed for success. Apparently as youngster his dream was to become an astronaut – a key to discovering fantastic adventures. Now that he is writing he invites us along on his fantasies. Brandon is also the excellent artist illustrator for his own books. Alfred is a dinosaur who is scary and mean and love to frighten other dinosaurs such as Tri the Triceratops and Vinny the Velociraptor, but an attempt to scare Vinny, Alfred's tail catches in a tree and Vinny walks away from the impaired Alfred, telling him that no one likes Alfred because he likes to scare them. Without help Alfred finally falls from the tree that hampers him, sees a black hole and enters it, and is transported in time to a contemporary Natural History Museum that houses skeletons of ancient dinosaurs. A "boy"™ appears (human of course) and is unafraid of Alfred. Alfred leaves the museum and enters the New York City Zoo where he encounters strange things such as dogs (that frighten him, making him encounter another tree), sorbet stands, and ultimately meets a little girl named Chloe who helps him out of his dilemma, treats him like a friend, teaches him to write and how to play ping pong and invites him to her home in New York City. Now Alfred must decide whether to stay or return " but his important lesson is the value of making friends! Brandon has a style that is unique " fine rhymes, fun and funny situations, interesting learning session about historic topics, and lessons of meaning for children. He also happens to be a very fine illustrator! Highly Recommended. Grady Harp, September 15

I really like this book. It is a an interesting story about a dinosaur looking for friends. The other dinosaurs in his time do not really get his sense of humor so he spends his time looking for friends who will. He ends up traveling through time. It takes a little while to find someone in the new time who understands him, but when he meets Cloe his dream comes true. They become friends forever and look forward to lots of adventures together. The really cool part is that the book provides interactivity to engage the readers. At the end of the book readers are given a link to have a say in what adventures come next. There is nothing more engaging than becoming part of the adventure.

I just read this book to my two Grandsons and they loved it. It is written wonderfully in rhyme and tells the story of Alfred who is a dinosaur who thinks it is fun to scare others. However, one day this backfires on him and the result is an adventure which takes him to another time. There he learns morals and discovers the true meaning of friendship. Not only did it allow us to have a great time talking about dinosaurs, but it also unusually encourages the children the chance to decide what happens to Alfred next.

This book is adorable. My seven year old son loved the illustrations. The story was quite adorable. It was cute to see what happened to Alfred when we when forward in time. My son and I would like to see more stories in the series and can't wait for the next one.
